The first of two tugs ordered by the Port of Tauranga, New Zealand has completed its 30-day voyage to start work. The new tug Tai Pari arrived recently following a 30-day voyage from builder Cheoy Lee's yard in Hong Kong.

She will be joined at the end of the month by her stable mate Tai Timu.

The new tugs form part of a $20 million project for the Port of Tauranga and represent one aspect of the ongoing $350 million capital expenditure programme.

The new tug is easy to find, and has been painted in the same rescue yellow as the pilot boat Arataki.

Tai Pari will have a quiet weekend, but is expected to start training with the port's tug crews next week before beginning work later this month.

The Tai Pari has had a month of running and the engines didn't miss a beat during the delivery voyage.
